August 12, 2008

Legal Electronic Health Records

Michelle Dougherty, Director, Practice Leadership for the American Health Information Management Association (AHIMA)

Rita Schichilone, Director, Practice Leadership, AHIMA

Organizations are investing in EHR applications with the focus on the care delivery process. This session addresses critical issues for a “compliant EHR”—one which helps supports compliance with the organization’s business as well as clinical needs. EHR systems must be supported by specific functionality to have properly maintained business records in the support of regulatory, payment, and litigation compliance.

Compliance professionals are often overlooked in the EHR selection process, but their insights are critical in selecting and maintaining a system that supports care delivery and the business needs of the organization. This session will provide the background and tools to assist compliance professionals in asking the right questions when evaluating current or new applications.
